Dedichiamo questo volume di Recercare a Giancarlo Rostirolla per il suo settantesimo compleanno in segno di stima e di gratitudine. Il nostro gesto ambisce ad essere qualcosa di più che un convenzionale e meritato atto d'omaggio nei confronti di un amico e di un collega che pure ha speso molto del suo tempo e delle sue energie a costruire iniziative di indubbio vantaggio per la ricerca musicologica. Con la nostra dedica desideriamo riconoscere che senza il suo impulso e il suo incondizionato sostegno ben difficilmente questa rivista avrebbe visto la luce e, soprattutto, sarebbe potuta crescere, superare lo scoglio dei primi anni di vita e conquistare una posizione internazionalmente riconosciuta. Lungo tutti questi anni l'entusiasmo e la fiducia di Giancarlo, prima come presidente e poi come presidente onorario della Fondazione Italiana per la Musica Antica, nei confronti di Recercare non si sono mai affievoliti, neppure negli inevitabili momenti critici sopravvenuti nel corso di quasi un quarto di secolo, e hanno perciò costituito un costante incoraggiamento per i direttori che si sono avvicendati e per il comitato scientifico. Di tutto ciò gli siamo profondamente grati. (am)

Music-selling in seventeenth-century Rome:
three new inventories from Franzini's bookshops
1621, 1633, 1686

While various research projects over the past decades have highlighted the status of music printing and publishing in Rome in the late Renaissance and Baroque period, still largely unexplained is the mechanism by which music was distributed from the printer to the public. In 1989, Tim Carter, the first to point out this lacuna, published his investigations on late Renaissance Florence.¹ The present study aims at providing a similar investigation on Rome, covering also the entire seventeenth century. Indeed, archive research has successfully turned up as many as four inventories for the Franzini bookshop, the principal book-sellers and publishers then operating in Rome, whose published works included a famous illustrated guide to the city: they refer to the years 1586, 1621, 1633 and 1686 respectively, only the first of which has already been published.² Together with the catalogue printed in 1676 – again for the Franzini, republished in modern times by Oscar Mischiati –³ they throw further light on the evolution, during the said century, of the following four points: (1) the sector's economic status; (2) the provenance of the volumes and, in particular, the extent of exchanges with non-Italian publishers; (3) the ratio between sacred and secular scores on sale (and therefore the market at which booksellers aimed); (4) the chronological spread of the repertory. As in other inventories of the kind, indications

INVENTORIES (APPENDICES I, II, III. IV):

In the transcription, all supplementary information is indicated in square brackets. Where possible, the compositions are identified (in some cases, several editions belong to the chronological period considered). If the publishing location is not stated, Venice is inferred. The mark '[?]' means that identification of the work is not possible, while the sign '[*]' indicates that the composition does not appear in the works consulted.⁴ Unknown or unidentified authors on the other hand are marked '[]'. The mark '?' in front of a work or author's name suggests possible identification. In cases where reading is defective, missing letters have been replaced by dots (e.g. 'Mon....di')

1. The Franzini's activity through their inventories: a chronology, 1568–1690

The first evidence of the Franzini's presence in Rome, a family originating from the province of Brescia, is found in 1568.⁵ The activity of Girolamo – whose bookshop was located on Via del Pellegrino, the street then favoured by booksellers – goes back at least to 1572. In partnership with Giorgio Ferrari (of Cremona) and Domenico Basa (from the Veneto), he also managed the Stamperia del Popolo Romano, at least up to 1589.⁶ From 1582 the presence of Francesco Carampelli is also documented in the area, another bookseller originating from Brescia, who was in business with Basa.⁷ We shall see that, in 1596, Francesco married Plautilla, the daughter and, in that same year, the universal heir of Girolamo.

The foregoing is an overview of the situation. Subsequent developments, focusing on the said inventories, will now be summarised chronologically. Fig. 1 illustrates the family tree only for persons involved in the said events.

1586. Drawing up of the inventory of the bookshop belonging to the brothers Girolamo and Giovanni Antonio Franzini, located on Via del Pellegrino, “ad signum Fontis” (at the sign of the Fountain): it stands out for its already substantial list of musical publications.⁸ The sign of the “Fountain” was to become the trade-mark for Franzini editions (Fig. 2). The locations of their bookshops are shown in Fig. 3.

1590. From his first will, we learn that Girolamo was, more precisely, a native of Salò (Brescia). He mentions his nephew Alessio.⁹

1592. Girolamo’s house sees the death of his brother Giovanni, known as ‘Piccino’, Alessio’s father. He too managed a bookshop located on Via del Pellegrino, at the sign “del Papa”: the inventory of this latter shop – drawn up in February of the following year – justifies the said name, revealing that it contained many books on religious subjects, such as bibles, missals, and antiphonaries.¹⁰ Alessio went on living at Girolamo's, where he died young in 1599.¹¹

1596. Girolamo dies. In his last will, he nominates as his universal heir his daughter Plautilla who, not even one month later, is united in marriage with Francesco Carampelli. He adds supplementary clauses giving rise to disputes among his heirs that lasted more than thirty years, which we shall deal with below. "Plautilla known [also] as Dimitilla" must still have been a minor in 1597, because in that year all matters relating to the inheritance were entrusted to an executor.¹² Again with regard to the inheritance, as early as 1600 a dispute is recorded between Plautilla and her own mother, Anna Gribbi.¹³ The Carampelli family and that of Giovanni Antonio Franzini continued however to live together, in the same house.¹⁴

1603. Several notarial deeds show that our characters maintained trade relations with the country of their birth. Giovanni Antonio Franzini who, after the death of his brother, continued activities at the bookshop "ad signum Fontis", appointed as his agent the Venetian printer Bonifacio Ciera. The latter was charged by him with reviewing the accounts for books of various kinds sent him by one Livio Gnechi of Padua.¹⁵ In turn, Francesco Carampelli gave a similar assignment to his nipote Antonio Carampelli, resident in Venice.¹⁶ Francesco (who signs his name as ‘Carampello’) must consequently have been a kinsman of the Bartolomeo Carampello, a printer operating in Venice, who in 1596 published Lodovico Zacconi’s Pratica di musica.¹⁷

1606. Business prospered for both families. Indeed, beside their activity as book-sellers, a deed reveals that in this year Giovanni Antonio Franzini, Francesco Carampelli and his wife Plautilla made over their printing works at the Zecca for nine years to a certain Giovanni Corti of Mondovi (Piedmont), in exchange for one-third of the profits.¹⁸

1621. Plautilla Franzini dies, leaving as her universal heir the “Compagnia di S. Anna”, whose office was in the Church of Ss. Faustino e Iovita della Nazione Bresciana, in Rome.²⁰ We have seen that Plautilla in turn had been named as universal heir by her father Girolamo. In his last will (1596), the latter had however added a clause that, if his daughter died without issue, the inheritance would revert to his wife (Anna Gribbi), to his brothers (Giovanni Antonio and Giovanni ‘Piccino’) or to his nephews. Since only the said nephews survived in 1621, and since Plautilla had no issue, Giovanni Domenico Franzini, son of Giovanni Antonio, challenged Plautilla’s

15. AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 4, vol. 72, f. 210, 7.6.1603. From f. 539 we learn that on August 1st 1603, Giovanni Antonio, again for the auditing of the accounts of Livio Gnechi, appoints as his agents “Ant. Oreva et Io. Hieronimum Rivam Genuae commorantes”.

16. This time, the legal proceedings were between Carampelli and one “Andreas de Puttis venum pictorem”: AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 4, vol. 72, f. 280 (19.6.1603) and fs. 486–7 (26.7.1603).

The existence of the two bookshops and their attached dwellings is evidenced by the registers kept at AV, S. Lorenzo in Damaso, Status animarum, also for the following years. On the denomination “Fontana d’argento”, see FRANCHI, Le impressioni sceniche, p. 283.

will and had an inventory made of the assets left by her.²¹ Of the said inventory, Appendix I transcribes only the part relating to musical publications. While awaiting a legal solution to this intricate matter, the inventoried assets remained in the custody of Francesco Carampelli, who thus continued to manage the bookshop at the sign of the “Fontana d’oro”, a part of which, however, belonged to Plautilla’s heirs.

1625. On 22 January Francesco Carampelli dies, aged about seventy-five, even though the death certificate states “of roughly 90 years”.²² In § 2 we shall see that, notwithstanding his advanced years, he had continued to enrich his bookshop with new publications. From his will, dated 22 June 1622, we learn that he was born at Sabbio, a locality not far from Salò, which was the Franzini’s home town. In it, he appoints as his universal heir his already-mentioned nipote Antonio, living in the Venetian Republic. Since Antonio only outlived him by one month, the inheritance passed to Antonio’s sons, Andrea and Pietro Carampelli. The part of the books belonging to Francesco, as a result of the division agreed to with Plautilla’s heirs, was sold to a certain Tomaso Egidio for 1,050 scudi. If we add other assets, the inheritance left by Francesco amounted to the not negligible sum of 1,195 scudi. That the latter had in the meantime continued to maintain trade relations with Venice is confirmed by the fact that the said will dated 1622 mentions “Messrs Sessa, printers in Venice” (the same who in 1589 had republished the famous Toscanello della musica by Pietro Aron) and, in the same city, “Alessandro Vincenzo” (i.e. the music printer Vincenti, to whom he owed money). He also left cash amounts to many persons close to him, including his shopboys, without however any mention of the Franzini.²³

1629. Legal procedures continue concerning the Plautilla inheritance. According to one estimate, her assets amount to the considerable sum of 5533.94 scudi. Deducting 500 scudi, which came from her dowry, the remaining total is 5033.94, which are shared out as follows: 2689.45 to the Compagnia di S. Anna (i.e. to the church of the Bresciani) and 2344.49 to the Franzini family.²⁴

1631. Of the said share belonging to the Franzini, it is agreed that 1415.24 scudi should be assigned to Giovanni Domenico and his sisters, all in books (of which

The voluminous inventory of the bookshop “in via Peregrini ad signum Fontis Aurei”, drafted in the presence of the notary, is found in AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 30, vol. 99, ff. 368r–517r, 27.10.1621.

22. AV, S. Lorenzo in Damaso, Liber defunctorum II, f. 116v: “22 gennaro 1625. From previous Status animarum registers for the same parish, however, it appears he must have been born around 1550.

23. AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 25, vol. 105, f. 375, 3.12.1626 (“Hereditas q. Francisci et Antonij Caramelli”). f. 377 shows the will dated 22 June 1622. On f. 382 the “Inventarium bonorum in hereditate q. 143.00 scudi in musical publications), while the rest goes to Giovanni Battista (son of the late Giovanni ‘Piccino’ and brother of Alessio, who died in 1599).²⁵

1633. As a result of the famous plague epidemic, in turn both Giovanni Battista and his sons died, so that the whole share due to the Franzini (2344.49 scudi) went to Giovanni Domenico and his sisters. In the month of February of that year he received all the books assigned to him in 1631. Some of the said books, after Carampelli’s death, had remained in the custody of the Compagnia di S. Anna (in the church of the Bresciani) and some (the musical editions) with Giovanni Domenico himself. Of those in the keeping of the Compagnia, some had deteriorated in the meantime, either owing to “woodworm and mice”, or to the floods of the Tiber. Attached is an inventory of all of them, undated, but probably going back to 1625, the year in which Carampelli died and Plautilla’s heirs took them in custody. The “libri di musica”, whose value amounted to only 10% of the estimated total in 1631, are transcribed in Appendix II. This abundant inventory, comprising a total of over three thousand titles, divides the remainder into various sectors, according to subject matter.²⁶ The entire activity thus focuses on Giovanni Domenico, who is certainly the most representative member of the family and the most active in the publishing sector.²⁷

1649. Like his predecessors, Giovanni Domenico maintained contacts with publishers internationally. This is confirmed by the fact that in this year he sent a bale of books, for the sum of 79.20 scudi, to the publisher J. Baudrand of Lyon, who in turn sent him volumes for the value of 65.70 scudi. Unfortunately, the latter were blocked at the port of Marseilles by one of Baudrand’s creditors, so that Giovanni Domenico had to nominate a banker as his proxy in order to be paid.²⁸ Just two years earlier, in 1647, he had moved his dwelling and shop from Via del Pellegrino to

26. AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 31, vol. 135, f. 275, 9.2.1633. With reference to the 2344.49 scudi owing to the Franzini, the document states: “of which scudi 1172.24 in books remaining in the custody of the Company, to be given to Giovanni Domenico” (a sign that the music books – valued in 1631 at 143.00 scudi, to which should be added 100.00 of sundry books – had remained in the latter’s custody). Ff. 279v–306v provide the inventory of the volumes, divided into the following sections, besides the “Libri di musica”: “Medicina varia”, “Rossi e neri legati” (= missals, breviaries, etc.), “Libri di Venezia sciolti”, “Filosofia varia”, “Libri di gramatica varia”, “Teologia”, “Poeti latini”, “Comedie varie”, “Libri guasti legati e sc. dal fiume” (for about 60 scudi), “Libri sciolti di stampa di Roma”, “Libri sciolti rotti”. To this deed is attached a statement by the Compagnia di Sant’Anna, which reads, “dovendosi consegnare la portione de libri messi a parte che spetavano alli heredi di Gio. Franzzino alias Picino o Gio. Battista Franzzini di Brescia e sui figlioli fidicommissari del q. The presence of Giovanni Domenico is also recorded at the general meetings of the “Compagnia di S. Tommaso d’Aquino de librari di Roma”, at the Church of S. Barbara de’ librari: see, for example, AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 31, vol. 142, f. 709 (1.4.1635) and f. 837 (22.4.1635).

Piazza di Pasquino, an area that in the meantime had become more suitable for his commercial activities (Fig. 3). There, in 1666, he passed on, leaving his publishing and book-selling activities to his son Federico.²⁹

1686. Federico however was not as lucky in his activities as his predecessors. On 16 July, at the instance of his creditors, a general inventory of his assets was compiled: the part concerning musical publications is transcribed in Appendix III.³⁰ Toward the end of the following month, he too died. On 22 December as many as forty-one creditors meet together, including ten booksellers who were his suppliers: Anisson and Huguettan of Lyon, Nicolò Pezzana and Giovanni Bersano of Venice, Giacomo Cadovino of Padua, Davico of Bologna, and four others from Rome (Leonardo Chouet, Giuseppe Lorenzo Saltini, Felice Cesaretti, and the heirs of the late Giovanni Capranica).³¹ The notarial deeds relating to the repayment of the said creditors are encountered at least up to 1690.³² Under such circumstances, Federico's sons abandoned their father's activity and, within a few years, the family died out (Fig. 1).³³

His shop on Piazza di Pasquino (at the corner of Via dei Leutari) was made over to Vincenzo de Romanis, and continued its bookselling activity. The inventory of goods drafted at the latter's death in 1716 reveals the presence of many books on legal subjects and various branches of learning, but not even one dealing with music. De Romanis, like Federico Franzini, left fairly hefty debts, mostly to the following booksellers who were his suppliers: Paolo Baglioni and Nicolò Pezzana of Venice, Anisson, Posuel, and Rigaud of Lyon.³⁴ The sale of musical publications had for some time transferred to the stationer-bookseller-publisher Sebastiano Testa (c1657–1729), whose shop at the sign 'del Cembalo' was also located on Piazza di Pasquino. Toward the end of the 17th century, interest in instrumental music had started to pick up: Testa is known to have reprinted at his own expense Corelli's second work and perhaps even his third (1701).³⁵

29. Again, in about 1650, the family's finances must still have been satisfactory, since in those years Federico, in his father's name, rented out an apartment in the house in which he lived: AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 25, vol. 246, f. 78, 4.1.1650; ID, vol. 248, f. 193, 16.9.1651.

2. The inventories: some statistical considerations

2.1. Known and unknown prints. A quantitative list of works recorded in the inventories is provided in Table 1. It is totally in harmony with the trends of the commercial fortunes of the Franzini and Carampelli, already outlined in § 1. In greater detail, in the 1633 inventory, we may note, beside an increase in titles, a drastic drop in the number of corresponding copies: for the most part just one per title, thus anticipating the approach adopted by many booksellers today.

TABLE 1. NUMBER OF AUTHORS, TITLES AND RELATED COPIES OF MUSIC PUBLICATIONS INDICATED IN THE INVENTORIES.

INVENTORY YEAR	AUTHORS NO.	TITLES NO.	VOLUMES MORE THAN	UNKNOWN WORKS OR AUTHORS, NO.
1586	72	122	—	11
1621	211	393	3363	38
1633	189	407	729	85
1676	233	372	—	—
1686	108	—	—	—

The said inventories also reveal the existence of now apparently unknown or lost prints, sometimes a considerable number, even reaching 20%, as in the one dated 1633. They include works by composers of a certain importance, such as Agostino Agazzari (I: 154), Costanzo Antegnati (II: 71, 173), Vincenzo Bellhaver (II: 246), Antonio Cifra (I: 11), Giovanni Croce (II: 100), Marco Facoli (II: 358), Giovanni Giacomo Gastoldi (I: 232; II: 157, 401), Ihan Gero (II: 252), Pietro Heredia (III: 120, 146), Giovanni de Macque (II: 144), Rinaldo del Mel (II: 314), Grammazio Metallo (I: 384), Philipp de Monte (II: 127, 129, 137), Annibale Orgas (I: 8), Girolamo Parabosco (II: 239), Ercole Pasquini (I: 271), Costanzo Porta (II: 200, 202), Cipriano de Rore (II: 111), Annibale Stabile (I: 186, II: 172), Paolo Tarditi (I. 31), Francesco Spongia Usper (II: 334), Ludovico Grossi da Viadana (II: 342, 343), and Giaches de Wert (II. 151). In addition, there are almost thirty authors whose traces have now been lost: see the Index (§ 6) for rapid identification.

It should be noted that in inv. III, the “Libri legati in fogli” (Folio books, bound) between [151] and [182] are all in sequence and marked with the clarification “in musica”. Among them are the printed folio scores of several Barberini musical works that have come down to us, such as Sant’Alessio by Stefano Landi, Vita humana by Marco Marazzoli, and Catena d’Adone by Domenico Mazzocchi. They also include however works, to all evidence also in the form of printed scores previously unknown, of which – except for Genoinda – all that has come down to us is the argomento (i.e. the plot, always in a format of less than a folio and often comprising just a few pages, making them incompatible with the heading of the said section, which effectively contained only folio books: see III: 151–182):³⁶

36. I wish to thank Arnaldo Morelli for his contribution in interpreting this major section of Inventory III.

- Virgilio Mazzocchi: [III: 179] Chi soffre speri, Roma 1637 (commedia musicale); [III: 174] S. Bonifazio, Roma 1638 (rappresentazione spirituale); [III: 178] La Genoinda, Roma 1641 (opera musicale); [III: 168] Il Sant'Eustacchio [...], Roma 1643 (azione in musica).
- Domenico Mazzocchi: [III: 167] Il martirio de' Santi Abundio [...], Roma 1641 (sacred opera).
- Giovanni Antonio Carpani: [III: 175] S. Cecilia, Roma 1660 (sacred drama).
- Raffaele Libelli: La Galatea (unknown work, already mentioned in inv. 1676, and therefore not Loreto Vittori's Galatea).

2.3. The publishers: Venice vs Rome. Just as with the inventory of the bookseller Piero di Giuliano Morosi of Florence (late 1580s or early 1590s, and possibly after 1592), in the case of the Franzini too (1586) almost all the musical publications came from Venice, then the European capital of the music printing trade (Table 2).³⁷ The Franzini were facilitated in this owing to their Veneto origin and, probably, also to the presence in Rome of not a few printers from the same area (see, for example, Basa, Coattino, Alessandro Gardano, the Zannetti). Nor can we exclude the possibility that some of the works came directly from Brescia itself, the native town of the Franzini, of Carampelli and the Zannetti. Indeed, we may recall that in 1586 Angelo Gardano stated that he had sent “piles of music books every week” to Brescia.³⁸

Only a few years later, however, Rome began to gain ground, due in particular to Nicolò Muzi (Mutij) and Alessandro Gardano: indeed, their editions are sold by the booksellers operating in the City, such as Giacomo Bericchia (1591) and Paolino Arnolfini (1596).³⁹ In the 1621 Franzini inventory, we also see that Rome almost manages to rival Venice, this time thanks to the publishing activity of printers such as Zannetti, Soldi and, most of all, Robletti (in the said inventory Nicolò Muzi is almost absent, probably because he sold his editions himself).⁴⁰ Bearing in mind that in that period Venetian publishing began to give way to Rome,⁴¹ we might expect that this trend in favour of the Eternal City would have continued, whereas the 1633 inventory on the other hand (drawn up however in 1625) shows that Venice regains its pride of place. This was probably due to a personal choice of the old Carampelli, from 1621 onward the sole manager of the shop at the sign of the “Golden Fountain”. Again in 1686 the ratio remains almost unvaried, albeit with a slight edge in favour of Rome (Table 2).

Unlike Florence,⁴² at least up to 1633 the Franzini and Carampelli bookshops are up-to-date from a publishing point of view. The first editions of music published in the five or six years prior to the drawing up of the related inventories are about 28 in 1586, 17 in 1621, and 25 in 1633. Of the more recent publications, the ones in the two latter inventories are those printed in Rome, providing further evidence of vigorous commercial activity by publishers in the City.

Extremely limited is the contribution of other Italian cities, such as Milan, Naples, Ferrara, and Bologna (a town that, in the second half of the century overtook Rome, of which however the 1676 inventory provides no evidence). Negligible are musical editions from beyond the Alps, as also the presence of works of composers other than Italians or foreigners operating in the Peninsula. Of the said oltramontane cities, the only ones mentioned are Antwerp (in 1597 the Franzini made purchases from Christoffel Plantin)⁴³ and Lyon (see § 1, years 1649, 1686), which used the port of Marseilles for deliveries to Rome. To audit the bill for books coming from Padua, in 1649 Giovanni Domenico Franzini had recourse to a correspondent at Genoa (see fn 15 above), hinting that this other port city may have been the transit hub for publications from the North.

2.3. The music: sacred vs secular. In Table 3 we see that in the 1586 inventory secular music is more than double sacred music, and this ratio is still more favourable to the secular sector with reference to the average of music published in Italy in those years (Table 4). This fact is also recorded in Florence for the same period.⁴⁴ In the 1621 inventory, on the other hand, the opposite is true and the ratio inverse, and here too it is in harmony with the average given by Table 4: this imbalance however is always such as to attenuate the penalty suffered by secular music during this period (in Table 4 the sacred-secular ratio is slightly higher than 2, while in Table 3 it is slightly lower). This difference is decidedly attenuated in the 1633 inventory. It thus appears that the booksellers' customers preferred secular music.

The churches probably had other procurement channels, possibly through the maestri di cappella themselves. This is the case, for example, of Francesco Soriano, magister of the basilica of St. Peter's: in a deed dated 1612, we learn that he had employed Giovanni Battista Robletti to print for him "some of his musical works" and that, in the same year, he collected from the said printer 25 "volumes of masses" composed by him, at the price of two scudi each.⁴⁵ This business relationship must have gone on for years, since another deed dated 1628 tells us that Soriano had left Robletti 20 scudi for the correction of some of his musical works.⁴⁶ Consequently, it is clear for this very reason that, strangely, a well-known composer like Soriano (1549–1621) does not appear in the inventories of 1621 and 1633 (= 1625). The same can be said – although to a lesser extent – of Palestrina and Giovanni Luca Conforti, since some of their works were printed at their own expense.⁴⁷ To such a list we may add the instrumental compositions by Girolamo Frescobaldi, by whom only a single work appears in the 1621 inventory (the Toccate, printed at his own expense in 1615–16), while in the 1633 inventory is totally absent.⁴⁸ The Franzini-Carambelli do not however appear to have had a particular preference for instrumental compositions (Table 3), such editions seeing a considerable development only toward the end of the century.

Also with regard to the second edition of the Recercari (Roma, B. Zannetti, 1618), in a private letter in that year, we read: "Io pensavo che se ne trovassi a' librari, non c'è altri che lui [= Frescobaldi] che li venda come opera sua"; GABRIELE GIACOMELLI, "Fortuna dell'opera frescobaldiana in Toscana attraverso il carteggio di Francesco Nigetti (1618–1657)", L'organo, xxv–xxvi, 1987–88, pp. 97–112: 99 (on pp. 106–107 we learn that as late as 1625 the situation was unchanged).

We have seen that, at least up to 1633, the Franzini-Carampelli repertory was kept up to date and an analysis of the 1621 inventory shows that this was even more so in the case of secular music. With regard to composers, for sacred publications the name of Antonio Cifra (1584–1629) stands out in particular, while for the secular his name is found together with that of Giovanni Francesco Anerio (1567–1630). Among the latter's compositions, the collection of "arie, canzonetti, e madrigali" La bella Clori armonica (Rome, Soldi, 1619) must have enjoyed considerable popularity: of the 72 copies recorded in 1621, not one remains in the inventory drawn up four years later (and we cannot be sure that in the meantime Carampelli had not procured other copies). The two said inventories show that the Salmi passeggiati con basso continuo by Conforti (Rome, Muзи heirs, 1601–02) must have been an even greater commercial success, the work intended not only for vocal soloists, but also for solists of bowed and wind instruments.

In the second half of the century, the Franzini's commercial activity declines both quantitatively and in works on sale. In secular music, which in these latter years seems to have been less updated than the sacred, we may note a surprising survival of the five-part madrigal (see, for example, the inventory printed in 1676).⁴⁹ Although the inventories are doubtless influenced by stocks, there must still have been a certain demand for music by earlier composers, such as the Primo libro dei madrigali a quattro voci by Archadelt (c.1504–1568), reprinted – as were others – by Andrea Fei in 1620 and 1642, both editions commissioned by our Giovanni Domenico Franzini (Fig. 2 above). Works by Palestrina were of course sold continually, as evidenced by the fact that, absent from the printed 1676 inventory, numerous copies reappear in the 1686 one.

49. CARTER, "Music publishing in Italy c.1580–c.1625", p. 28 has already remarked that "the five-part madrigal does not appear to have suffered significantly from the competition of the newer genres with basso continuo at least until the second decade of the [17th] century".

4. APPENDIX II

AS, 30 Not. Cap., uff. 31, vol. 135, fs. 279r–306v, 9.2.1633. Inventory of the books that, subsequent to his death (1625), were removed from the bookshop of Francesco Carampelli because they were assigned to the heirs of Plautilla Franzini. Although dated 1633, the inventory thus gives a picture of the situation in 1625. Only the books of musical interest have been transcribed, i.e. the section entitled “Libri di musica”. The inventory is drafted in excellent handwriting on paper that is still in top condition, so that the reading rarely provides problems of interpretation.
